

AUTHORS BIO DATA

Valtencir Maldonado is the Coordinator of the Global University Network for Innovation's Observatory on Universities and Social Commitment. He has a Degree in Computer Science, postgraduate studies in Software Engineering and has a Master's Degree in Design and Development of Interactive Multimedia Applications. He was involved in the implementation of the electronic voting system in Brazil, his home country, and has been working for a variety of non-profit organisations since 1995 and has been engaged in a number of interdisciplinary and intercultural projects in the field of development aid. He is currently enrolled in a doctoral programme at the Universitat Politècnica de Catalunya (UPC) and his thesis deals with the relationship between Higher Education, ICT and the non-profit sector. In addition he has been taking part in various courses and post-graduate lectures about the relationship between the third sector, government and higher education institutions; fair trade; and international relations.

Josep Lobera is research fellow at the Global University Network for Innovation (GUNI). He holds two Bachelor's degrees in Materials Engineering from the Institut National Polytechnique de Lorraine, France, and the Universitat Politècnica de Catalunya (UPC), (1999) and a Master from the University of Houston (2000). He prepared reports for the Inter-American Development Bank (IADB) in Central America (2004). Since 2005, he is Research Fellow at GUNI. He is one of the authors of the OECD Country Background Report for Spain on Tertiary Education, requested by the Spanish Ministry of Education (2005-2006). He coordinates some research projects at GUNI, like the Delphi Poll 2008 on the role of higher education. He also works on curricular innovation aimed to include transdisciplinary issues into higher technical studies.

Cristina Escrigas is currently the Executive Director of GUNI. She is Social Psychologist (Autonomous University of Barcelona, UAB) and holds an MBA and a Master in Training of Trainers, Methodology and Management (Universitat Politècnica de Catalunya - UPC), and a Master in Organization Development (GR Institute). She was working on strategic management and institutional change at the UPC for 8 years and was Director of the Seminar on Strategic University Management for 5 years. She was also Director of the UNESCO Chair of Higher Education Management. She worked for over two years in the Universal Forum of Cultures, as Director of Participation, encouraging civil organizations to become involved in promoting the Forum and its program. She was Deputy Executive Director of the Global University Network for Innovation (GUNI) and directed its Observatory of Good Practices and the Delphi Poll.